

Teacher Decision Making in Reading Instruction:

Tapping into Teacher Knowledge

Robin Griffith, Ph.D.

From Teachers:

Thank you so much for your thoughtfulness, effort, and time that you gave to me today. This overall experience, from the observations, coaching, and afternoon PDs, has forever stretched my thinking and challenged my actions and decisions. I am excited and inspired to "reframe difficulty into opportunity," for myself, as I grow in my teaching practice, and for my students, as they grow in their reading independence and thinking.

Thank you so much for modeling your coaching moves. You have set such a great example of how to help transform teachers through reflective practice.

Teaching IS Decision Making.

Effective teachers make thoughtful, responsive teaching decisions. I help teachers make effective teaching decisions by providing professional development based upon the context and goals of the lesson and the strengths and needs of the individual learners.

Professional development offerings include:

- Full day or multi-day workshops
- Workshop series
- Individual or grade level coaching sessions
- Long-term support of teachers
- Summer professional development

Areas of focus:

- Guided Reading
- Shared Reading
- Reading Workshop
- Reading Comprehension

Contact: r.griffith@tcu.edu (252)561-5937 www.robingriffith.com